

Quick Reference Guide

To assist with harassment, discrimination and child protection issues
in sport and recreation

July 2013

introduction

Sport and recreation organisations across the country regularly have to deal with a range of harassment, discrimination and child protection issues involving players, coaches, officials and spectators.

This Quick Reference Guide shows where you can find the essential information and services to help you resolve these issues, including:

- Referring illegal or unlawful behaviour
- Promoting a positive, child-safe environment
- Making and resolving complaints

Getting help . . .

The Guide also includes links to key sporting and recreation bodies, government agencies and non-government organisations, along with a short description of the support they can provide.

- Sport and recreation organisations: National
- Sport and recreation organisations: State and territory
- Police
- Child protection/child welfare agencies
- Equal opportunity and anti-discrimination agencies
- Dispute resolution and mediation services
- Legal services and advice
- Counselling services

Information on Reporting child abuse and Working with children checks is also available on our website: www.playbytherules.net.au/resources.

Making and resolving complaints

Every sporting organisation needs an effective procedure for managing complaints.

Sometimes different processes will be required to resolve a complaint, depending on the nature of the complaint, the organisation's legal requirements and the individuals involved.

The Play by the Rules website has information on making a complaint, being complained against and dealing with a complaint. It also features a complaint handling tool for sports administrators and videos on the complaint process.

Making a complaint

Sport should be a place where you enjoy yourself, develop friendships and have fun. It's not a place where you should be subjected to discrimination, harassment or abuse. If this behaviour occurs, you have every right to make a complaint.

The Complaints Flowchart (following) can help you work out who to contact and how a complaint may be resolved. It sets out scenarios for resolving complaints that involve issues at the:

- Club/local level
- State level
- National level.

More information or advice

There are a range of groups that can provide specialist advice and service to help individuals and organisations resolve a complaint or deal with conflict:

- Dispute resolution and mediation services in your state or territory.
- Australian Human Rights Commission or your state or territory's equal opportunity agency (for complaints involving discrimination, harassment or victimisation).

Complaints Flowchart

If you need information, advice, to make a complaint or to raise a concern in relation to inappropriate behaviour in sport (such as harassment, discrimination or abuse), this chart may assist in working out who to contact and how. Start at the level (club, state or national) that the incident occurred.
